KUBISHEV, Dec. 4.—Soviet Russia is harnessing its industry, its agricultural resources and its manpower to the needs of war with a rapidity and completeness which would be hardly possible in a country less centralized than this one. The most widely publicized slogan of the Soviet Union these days is "everything for the front." Casually these words are dimmed to the public eye. You hear them in speeches, you see them on posters, you read them in the newspapers.

Ottawa Studies Plans Mobilize Manpower Needs

A index to pass on the men drafted for the home defense army.

If the mobilization is extended as planned, the government is faced with the problem of calling up the unemployed men and children under the age of 24 years, as at July, 1940, will call all the nation's manpower between 20 and possibly 40 years of age into the armed forces.

BOARD WILL DECIDE

Men who are drafted to a board will have been instructed to take medical examination and the board will consider his present occupation, family responsibilities, past experience, age, and the category in which the doctor places him.

These boards then will decide whether he should remain in his present occupation, be sent to the home defense army or to some other industry where his services would be required.

This plan, if decided upon, will require a large increase in the number of boards.

An drafting men for home defense, representatives of the National Defense and the National Labor Board appear when an appeal for post-employment of military service is being considered.

The feeling here was that if the function of the district board is extended to cover all manpower it will be necessary to have representatives of agriculture, industry, and commerce claim to a man's services if he is an experienced farm worker or engaged in a less essential occupation. Other interests might also have representatives.

NOT YET DECIDED

One source emphasized the government has not yet decided on such a policy for mobilization of manpower, but it said it is possible that the most far-reaching scheme advanced.

In the meantime committees are working on manpower information to be used to determine the information compiled in the national registration law.

The government also has the information that the government is considering a plan to increase unemployment insurance rates covering 5,000 employees, more than 100,000 of whom are men.

Work on these plans has been in progress for several weeks and reports from these committees doubt that they will have a hearing, the policy which the government will decide, it was said.

Importance of Athabasca Oil Area Stressed

LONDON, Ont. Dec. 4.—(C.P.)—

John MacNeil, Conservative member of parliament for Toronto-Davenport, said in an address to the Canadian Club here Wednesday Canada would be a major prize for Nazi Germany because the Athabasca oil fields are believed to possess the world's largest oil supply—a supply badly needed by Germany at war.

Mr. MacNeil said authority of the federal bureau of mines had estimated the total oil supply in the region at 100,000,000 barrels, while United States authorities had estimated the supply at 250,000,000 barrels. The world's known oil supply from wells in operation at present is 80,000,000 barrels, he said.

GERMAN PLAN

"Before the public press campaign stating that the Germans had engineered whether Canada would secure a line of a pipe line from oil fields in western Canada," the Pacific Coast MacNeil said. "There is only one oil field today in western Canada which produces surplus available in Canada would supply the urgent need for oil. The Germans need 'total war.' Germany and Russia together produce 50,000,000 barrels of oil annually. They need at least 150,000,000 barrels yearly to carry on their war."

Wheat Pool Calls For Parity Prices

CALGARY, Dec. 4.—(C.P.)—

Concluding an eight-day convention here, the members of the Alberta Wheat Producers' Association of active farmers in R. D. Purdy, general manager, in which he said that the wheat pool is now in a position to demand parity prices for its wheat.

The operations of the pool are an open book, he knew of no organization so frank and open in presenting the annual meeting and information regarding accounts and other business," he said.

A resolution was passed to ask the government to take the distribution of the seven pool districts to be made in the next annual meeting.

A program was drafted which included the following:

1.—Parity price for all agricultural products.

2.—An international wheat agreement allowing to each wheat producer a share of the world market and the fixing of a reasonable minimum price for wheat.

3.—A planned land use soil conservation plan with necessary soil conservation payments to the plan of the insurance plan of the pool.

4.—The pool to be carried out throughout the country in almost every branch of industry.

For instance, at St. Vrain, a metropolitan in western Alberta, only four of the city's 17 factories were producing defense goods before the war. Now nearly all of them are doing war work and have been given new plants brought from west Russia.

The equipment of all factories has been closely surveyed with a view to obtaining maximum variety and amount of output from existing machinery. This is a plan to use two types of munitions, today in making 14.

To compensate partially for heavy losses in equipment in the path of the German advance, the government and Canadian military organizations are continuing to bring war industries to squeeze the maximum utility out of their machinery through rationalization of methods, avoidance of waste and speeding up of all processes.

In many cases discarded or worn-out machinery is reutilized and repaired. Special machinery has been given to the development of local substitutes for war materials which are unavailable or too expensive to transport over great distances. Naturally this initiative cooperation on war industries has made it necessary to reduce or suspend production of numerous types of consumption goods not regarded as absolutely vital.

The Kulyshew newspaper, Volga Commune, reflects the government's attitude. It declares that "industry must identify itself with the interests of the front, and only then can it survive."

The policy of everything for the front and the sacrifice of civilian life is an intensification of the field of war. Many schemes for supplying the front with necessities and the delivery of their parts is being pushed by the state.

Edmonton's Guest

Mr. Malcolm MacDonald is hardly a stranger to Edmonton, having visited the city some years ago as a member of a debating team from the University of Oxford. He comes now in the capacity of Britain's high commissioner to Canada, to discuss with Edmonton audiences why there and other countries have banded themselves together against Hitler and Hitler's Axis. For both reasons the visit is heartily welcomed. He is well qualified to trace the course of events which culminated two years ago in the attack upon Poland and the opening of the second world war. And equally well informed, as a member of the Churchill cabinet, with the progress of the war, and the fight for freedom, and the part Canada is playing in the struggle.

It is well that from time to time men who speak with authority should publicly review the origin of this world tragedy, and survey the situation as it now stands from the viewpoints of the nations fighting to defend themselves against the aggressors. Precisely how it came about that we are fighting, and how to fight our way out of the appalling incidents of the battle, and it is easy to misjudge how the battle is going generally. Too close attention to operations in this field or that, the addresses of Mr. MacDonald will help re-clarify the situation as it now stands for his Edmonton hearers, and to give them a better conception of the broad trend of the combat.

A Poser For Kurusu

President Roosevelt put Kurusu on the spot when he asked him to obtain from Tokyo a statement of the purpose of Japanese troops being massed in Indo-China in defiance of the agreement with Vichy, and beyond all possibility for police action. The Tokyo official offered the evasive response that Vichy has agreed to allow more troops to be sent into its colonies. The Tokyo official is sending them there. Mr. Sumner Welles is not the man to forget what he is asked in this connection. He is a president, nor to be put off with anything less than a straight answer.

Meanwhile a squadron of British battleships has been ordered to Singapore. This may help the cabinet at Tokyo to decide what explanation it will offer to the presence of the battleships in Indo-China. Since the colony borders both Thailand and China, these Japanese forces might be intended to thrust in either direction. Thailand has been invaded, and war with Britain will follow, and war with the United States will almost certainly also result, at once or later.

When it can no longer dodge the President's question, Tokyo is rather likely to say China is the cause. This is the objective of its Indo-China army; having regard for the presence of the newly arrived battleships at Singapore.

Goering Sees It Too

With Von Kiehl's army backtracking from Rome, and the German Kommande scrambling tank divisions cutting erratic circles in the desert in search of a way out of Cunningham's trap, and the light of possible defeat has thrust itself into the vision of another of Herr Hitler's counselors. As Herr Goebbels did a month ago, Herr Goering has now found it advisable to warn the German people that terrible consequences would fall upon them should the Fuehrer's military might be shattered.

Just what these consequences were suggested to be, the despatches do not state. But the tone and the purposes of the exhortation are made clear. It was designed to prepare the nation for the worst, and to make it realize that if the German people were to be defeated, and to urge every German to work still harder to avert calamity.

What takes the place of confidence in the Goering mind must have warned him that the fearful account he has piled up against Germany may have to be paid in the same coinage in which the debt to justice was incurred—blood. No one knows better than the head of the German army how the total of the crimes he has committed in the German name, how bitter is the hatred thus engendered, and what may happen to the military machine so crippled that the conquered peoples will see their chance to break their bonds and wreak vengeance upon their persecutors.

For the brutalities which have made the German name a curse to the peoples of Europe it is Goering who is held directly responsible, as the commander-in-chief of the Hitler forces, and as the authority in the matter. No wonder he calls upon the nation to exert itself as never before to avert defeat, for in the matter of his fate, as certain as German hands if not those of armed opponents or outraged captives. That Goering calls so loudly is proof that defeat is staring before him as a very possible event.

Unhappy Italy

Signor Mussolini's news and propaganda agency reports the discovery at Trieste of a long-standing and quite successful conspiracy of "fascist persons," which has wrecked munitions factories, sabotaged railways, and even tried to assassinate Il Duce. The organization has been operating, it says, for four years—that is, from about the time Mussolini began to strut the stage as a partner in Hitler's planning a carnival of outrage and robbery against neighboring nations.

The announcement is another—and official—contradiction to the already ample evidence that Italy is not united in support of the policy of slaughter under a Nazi conspiracy of that kind could not carry on for four years under the noses of the Fascist gendarmes unless it had the sympathy of thousands and the cooperation of hundreds outside its circle. And if Trieste has been the centre of so extensive, active and continuing network of sabotage, the assumption is that similar organizations have been at work elsewhere.

Still further evidence to the same effect is the delight expressed by Italian soldiers when they are taken prisoner in Libya. For them capture only means a way out of a war into which they were forced, in which they have no personal interest, which has already cost them in March and the announcement of the neutrality act in November the price of their lives.

It is now in force, and there is no reason for thinking that it will need to be reconsidered or radically revised, unless there is a radical change in the situation. Until and unless there is, none will be taken by the prospect of new decisions will have to be taken. But until and unless there is, none will be taken by the prospect of new decisions will have to be taken. But until and unless there is, none will be taken by the prospect of new decisions will have to be taken.

The Australian cruiser Sydney is presumed lost with all hands. News of its probable loss was received from survivors of an enemy raider which the Sydney sank. The cruiser carried a crew of 645. The Sydney's fate and Domition will have the deep sympathy of Canadians, who have known similar losses.

The despatches say that when Premier Pattullo walked out of the "no longer a labor convention at Vancouver delegates gave him a 'great ovation'." They had just passed a resolution which left him no course but to abdicate the leadership of the party, but they cheered him for standing by what he believed to be his duty. "From the fact that he has stood by his duty," and "vitality—springing from the essence and strength of popular government," said that they had applauded the fidelity and courage of those who disagree with them. They cheered Pattullo.

Turning Point In The U.S.

Means the Adoption of a Pre-ventive Defence Policy

By WALTER LIPPMANN

The country (the United States) has passed through a most difficult period, and it is very important that we should all try to realize as clearly as we can how radically different are the issues that we are now facing. The turning point was at two events: the repeal of the neutrality act and the arrival of Mr. Kurusu.

The votes in Congress on the repeal of the neutrality act, the long controversy between the interventionists and the isolationists, the debate the interventionists have waged to defeat the Western Hemisphere, the Allies to maintain command of the Atlantic Ocean, the isolationists have preferred to stand on the high ground of the moral principle of non-intervention, the policy called for preventive action to forestall a danger which was not yet directly upon us, the need for the action was not apparent to every one, and therefore the risks of acting were clear to many Americans than were the risks of not acting. Nevertheless, a considerable and a vast majority of which came to favor the interventionist policy, and in the period between the enactment of the act and the arrival of Mr. Kurusu, the neutrality act in November the price of their lives.

It is now in force, and there is no reason for thinking that it will need to be reconsidered or radically revised, unless there is a radical change in the situation. Until and unless there is, none will be taken by the prospect of new decisions will have to be taken. But until and unless there is, none will be taken by the prospect of new decisions will have to be taken. But until and unless there is, none will be taken by the prospect of new decisions will have to be taken.

What Might Have Been

By MME. CHIANG KAI-SHEK

There is nothing like a great conflagration to clear the way for large-scale improvement, and there is perhaps nothing like a war such as we have been waging in self-defence to prepare the way for a far-reaching remoulding of our national character in particular and our national life in general. The political dignity that we so disfigure in the first two years of our national endeavor to inaugurate a democratic system of government, in place of the old autocratic rule, has been shattered in a flash before Japanese aggression, and everything else that is subject to metamorphosis under the impact of a great crisis has been swept away. It is now in force, and there is no reason for thinking that it will need to be reconsidered or radically revised, unless there is a radical change in the situation. Until and unless there is, none will be taken by the prospect of new decisions will have to be taken. But until and unless there is, none will be taken by the prospect of new decisions will have to be taken.

Mountain Playgrounds

Canada's Mountain Playgrounds, a new publication of the National Parks Bureau, Department of Mines and Resources, presents a profusely illustrated story of a booklet which has been applied to "Fifty State National Parks." This booklet provides the reader with glimpses of the scenic wonders of our national parks in western Canada—Banff, Jasper, Waterton Lakes, Yoho, Kootenay, Mount Revelstoke and Mount Robson. It also traces briefly the history of Canada's mountain parks. In 1885, when a small area surrounding hot mineral springs at Banff in the Rocky Mountains was set aside for the public domain. This area formed the nucleus of the present Banff National Park. The national parks, which were originally established to maintain the primitive beauty of the mountains and the surrounding recreational areas, and are visited by millions of Canadians and tourists from other lands.

If some people could be two places at once it would be a break for picture shows.

Running Comment

cannot place itself in the position of re-peating or of weakening the policy itself.

The end of the controversy over intervention as a preventive policy of active defence in the Pacific has coincided with the mission of Mr. Kurusu. The question is not only whether we should intervene, but what we shall take intervention measures, running risks to avert greater risks, but whether we can hold our positions or whether we shall be forced out of them. For many years, indeed, since this very month, we have had the problem—always a very hard one for a democracy—of looking forward and of taking action in our own initiative. Over that problem we have been altered because the fundamental decision—as to whether there is to be war or peace—depends not upon what we propose but upon what Japan decides to do. If the negotiations fail, we shall not declare war upon Japan and attack Japan but Japan may start a war in which we shall have to fight back. It is a realization that, and that is why there is no such division of opinion as there has been over our Atlantic policy. The country understands that if war is to be avoided, it can only be by making it perfectly clear to Japan that we can retreat no further.

Thus there has disappeared the cause of the ground of the political dignity of the country, and the time has come when the responsible members of the opposition must examine the new situation and re-evaluate their line of action. The question is a very grave one for the Republican party and for the country. Up to this point their opposition has, whatever their critics may have said, been a contribution to the making of national policy. But now the policy has been decided upon, it cannot be reversed, and therefore opposition becomes illegitimate in so far as it changes the practical operation of the policy, or incites to disaffection and discontent at the government or to give comfort to the enemy abroad.

Glass Shells

LONDON NEWS-CHRONICLE

Home Guards, in the event of an invasion attempt, are to be equipped with a projector, an anti-tank device, and a hand-thrown sticky bomb. This is in addition to the hand-thrown sticky bomb, which is already being revealed.

The Northover projector has quite a long range, and it is said that it is at that range it cannot miss. It is a machine which can fire four legs to which wheels can be added. The charge is a glass shell which breaks on hitting its object. "I would like to bowl at Bradman's head with one of these," said a member of the Home Guard. "It would go straight through his bat and hit the wicket."

Too Much Speed

A few years ago the opinion prevailed among many experts as well as in the public mind that speed had little to do with traffic accidents. Arbitrary limits, especially if under 50 miles per hour, became unpopular, and the argument was that because the new cars were easily controlled, the new roads were wide and smooth, there were past had lost its significance.

The result was not what devotees of the open road had expected. Accidents and fatalities continued to increase, not only on country roads but on city streets, and the opinion now is held that too much speed is the explanation. Many have pointed out that the legal maximum of 30 m.p.h. is too high for safety, that 50 on the highway is dangerous because in practice it means much more driving at 60 and up. The new cars, as more evidence of this new trend, comes word that a proposal has gone to the United States Congress for a national law setting 45 m.p.h. as the maximum speed anywhere in the country. This is not likely to become law, because a wide question of state right would be involved, but it does indicate how people are thinking on this subject.

Cubs Trade Hank Leiber To Giants For Bob Bowman

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Dec. 3.—(AP)—The Chicago Cubs traded outfielder Hank Leiber to the New York Giants for pitcher Bob Bowman and an unannounced sum of cash last night in the first important deal of the winter baseball meeting.

Officials of the two clubs met in a hotel room and dickered for hours before finally closing the deal.

Leiber, who formerly played with the Giants, is one of the leading sluggers of the National League while Bowman, a right-hander, is a promising pitcher whom the Giants obtained about a year ago from the St. Louis Cardinals.

Bowman won six and lost seven games for the Giants last season, although he pitched in only 33 games in 1941 and had an insignificant batting average of .216, although he is considered a 300 hitter.

LINDSAY BATTERS LOS ANGELES BANTAM

Diaz Beaten By Technical K.O.

Sam-Bang Battle Stopped In Fifth

VANCOUVER, Dec. 3.—(CP)—Kenny Lindsay, Vancouver bantamweight, scored a fifth round technical knock-out over Nash Diaz of Los Angeles in an overweight match here Wednesday night. Lindsay weighed 122, Diaz 119.

Lindsay proved too fast and smart for the Los Angeles fighter, wading in with a two-fisted attack that dropped the southern boy after 2-01 minutes of the fifth round when the referee halted the fight.

Both boys forgot the usual "feeling out" preliminaries and wasted into each other from the starting bell.

Lindsay kept the Los Angeles fighter off balance with a fast jab and parried in the occasional right hook.

The Vancouver fighter, who is scheduled to meet an as yet unannounced opponent at Edmonton Dec. 15, showed Diaz through the first four rounds with wicked body blows that knocked the Californian half through the ropes in the fourth.

After rocking Diaz from the opening bell of the fifth, Lindsay dropped him with a terrific left hook to the body before the bout was stopped.

AGGRESSOR FROM START
From the opening bell, Lindsay the light, driving Diaz around the ring and drew first blood in the first round with a stinging left to the nose.

At the end of the fourth round was bleeding profusely from the Vancouver boy's lightning left jab and solid right hooks to the face.

Diaz was the aggressor in the fourth and caught Lindsay with a hard right, but the Vancouver bantam showed the southern down with a hard right to the body that sent Diaz half through the ropes.

Lindsay had this groggy from the start of the fifth with a two-fisted attack and finally dropped him at 2:01 with a vicious left hook to the body.

Officials of the Middle Atlantic League once devoted a long session to wrangling about whether they should adopt the American or National League ball.

One argued the American League ball was too lively, another that the National League ball would "take a deep curve" and curb hitting. Finally they called in a representative of the manufacturer, who told him the two balls were made on exactly the same machine and merely stamped with different names.

FAMOUS PLAYERS THEATRES

Empress
Tomorrow!

The exquisite documentary film, re-stained, intelligent, free from techie waving and dramatic pretense, is eloquent with superb photography and suspense. It is far & away the best picture that has come out of World War II.

Baseball Faces

Critical Season

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Dec. 4.—(AP)—Port C. Frick, president of the National League, predicted Wednesday night that professional baseball would face critical difficulties in the next six months.

"Baseball in the next six months will face as acute a test as any time in its 106-year history," he told a gathering of the National Federation of baseball writers. "Certainly the army draft will catch up with us. We now have priorities on Australian wool, gasoline and other materials. We may be playing with willow baseballs before we get through."

"During the next six months and the next year, we must work with our eyes open and our heads up. All forms of athletic competition in this country will be affected."

About 44 per cent of United States citizens are churchgoers.

THE FINEST PICTURE TO COME OUT OF THE WAR!

THE TARGET FOR BOMBERS

Target for Tonight (Crown Film Unit, Warner) could never have been made in Hollywood. It is a real, it had to be made exactly where it was, on the flying fields of England, over the grim, living fields of England, over the grim, living fields of England, over the grim, living fields of England.

Target is a full, authentic, minute re-creation of the life of a bomber pilot in the RAF, bombing raid by night, from the terrible packet of nerves in the RAF, bombing raid by night, from the terrible packet of nerves in the RAF, bombing raid by night, from the terrible packet of nerves in the RAF.

Barrage Balloons Are Answering Critics By Proving Invaluable In Many Wartime Duties

When World War II began most military men scoffed at barrage balloons, but the British are finding many practical uses for them. Here the big sausages float over a freighter as protection against dive bombing and machine gun strafing from planes.

"War" Comes To Erin

FOR VALOUR

Robert Shankland
V.C., D.C.M.

Here of the Cameron Highlanders of Winnipeg in the last war serves again. Major Robert Shankland, V.C., D.C.M. (left) is seen signing his attendance papers for German War Two.

Early in October, 1917, the Canadian Corps returned to the Ypres Salient of bitter memories. In a last effort to force the enemy from Passchendaele Ridge before the winter shut down to halt aggression until another spring. Ever since the Third Battle of Ypres had opened on July 31, British, Australian and New Zealand divisions had fought doggedly forward under atrocious conditions, but the high ground around Passchendaele village held out to hood British eyes from the green, unshelled fields of the German back-country to the eastward.

By the time the Canadians reached the scene, the battlefield had become a hideous quagmire. The offensive had opened after the longest bombardment—8 days of counter-battery fire and 10 of intense shelling—ever carried out in British pre-battle preparations. Throughout August and September it had been attack on attack with brief lulls between, to consolidate, to bring up fresh troops, to drag the guns forward through the mud. That prolonged harranging had blocked the ancient dikes and drainage system of the reclaimed Flemish marshland, and unprecedented rains had then transformed the battle scene into an all but trackless and impassable morass.

To reach any objective other than abomination of desolation, or to carry out mere duty alone, required a tremendous effort. To reach the heights of valor and resolute fighting spirit such as that displayed by Robert Shankland of the 4th Canadian Battalion on October 26, demanded something new and great in sustained courage and inspired leadership.

Lieutenant Shankland's historic exploit which won him the Victoria Cross took place close to the village of St. Julien, a name that already resounded in Canadian ears with tragic memories and glorious fighting traditions. It was nearby that the 1st Canadian Division had made its gallant stand in April, 1915. Every cross-road, valley, wood and ridge-top was already immortalized by Canadian heroism. Capt. Shankland had already won the Distinguished Conduct Medal in the neighborhood, and now added a memorable feat to the history of Canadians at Ypres and of the Canadian Corps.

His first citation of the D.C.M. read: "For conspicuous gallantry in volunteering to lead a party of stretcher-bearers under very heavy shell-fire and bringing in some wounded and partially buried men. His courage and devotion were most marked." It was for splendid work during the fighting at Sanctuary Wood in June, 1916. He was commissioned later that year, on the Somme, and his second honor citation, that for the Victoria Cross, was for extreme gallantry in 1917 in the role of company commander with the Camerons.

The 4th Battalion started moving into the front line during the early night of October 25th, relieving dead-weary New Zealanders whose attacks in the sector had finally bogged down in front of Bellevue Spur, a bravely manned

Introducing The Brotherhood of Courage

by
J. L. RALSTON

Minister of National Defence.

This is the first of a series of stories of soldierly devotion to duty and great personal heroism. Each is a necessarily inadequate account of some deed of high gallantry by a Canadian soldier which won for him the coveted little bronze cross, so simply inscribed "For Valour," but denoting membership in the most exclusive brotherhood of courage ever known to fighting men.

The whole series will constitute an invaluable addition to the proud record of Canada-at-war. I believe this is the first time an attempt has been made to tell in detail every exploit which won the Victoria Cross for a Canadian in the 1914-1918 conflict.

Even in the cold consciousness of official phrasing of the citations, a mighty saga can be read of valourous men of action, of extraordinary fearlessness and of personal heroism that often rose high above mere duty and certainly above thought of death. Each episode of spectacular and impetuous bravery, of remarkable fighting leadership, or of all but divine self-sacrifice carries a powerful inspirational message to all Canadians in these troubled and tempestuous times.

It is notable that of the 33 Canadian soldiers who survived the exploit which gave them the highest award for valour in the gift of His Majesty, every officer and man who could possibly pass the medical examiner is once more in uniform. One who enlisted in the last war as a private now commands a division in England; another commands a military district in Canada; one is in the Veterans' Guard; some are in the ranks as instructors, and others who were in the ranks in the last war are now officers, mentors and teachers of the new army. All are inspired with the same high-minded impulse—to serve their country without thought of themselves.

his cool defiance of danger electrified the whole Battalion. His very presence—and he was everywhere along the shell and bullet-swept line—was a veritable tower of strength to his dead-weary and almost, but not quite, demoralized men.

His swift grasp of the situation and its needs, and his ability to rally the remnants of the unit, undoubtedly turned a possible falling assault into a success. He disposed his limited forces to such advantage that they were able to inflict heavy casualties upon the enemy as they retreated and began to organize for a counter-attack.

By the time the German attack was launched at the thinly-held 4th Battalion line, the whole atmosphere had changed. The men had been so inspired by their leader that they had regained all their old aggression and fighting heart. They were so well posted that they commanded the ground in front of them and they fought back with such unyielding courage that the Germans, who far outnumbered them, were beaten off.

It was a long, hard day but at the end of the actual fighting, Lieutenant Shankland's line was still holding on and because of their fine stand supporting troops were able to come up unharmed.

"Sniper" Saved

Snipers are deadly to the foe, but the foe is also deadly for them. Preparing for eventualities, British Medical Corps rescues a "wounded" sniper from a tree in rural region.

Claimed Captive

Two American newspaper correspondents, Godfrey Anderson, above, of the Associated Press, and Ludwell Denny, of the New York Times, are among the prisoners captured by Axis forces in Libya.
